A Remarkable Truth

"Few persons realize," concludes Orange Judd Service Bureau, "that the domestic trade of the American people is from 98 to 100 times larger than their foreign trade; that is to say, for every $1 or $2 of the United States import and export trade, the people within the continental limits of this nation buy and sell with each other to the extent of $98 or $99." Uncle Sam may therefore be represented as exclaiming: "After all this war suddenly upset only about 1 per cent of my business but I am worrying along pretty well with the other 99 per cent. Meanwhile I am straightening out this matter of shipping and international banking. A few weeks hence I will be doing a bigger export trade than ever and at better prices, with correspondingly increased activity in my vast domestic business. I am going to have a job for every one at good wages, with resulting prosperity all along the line."
